

The Hindu Story

Ann Smith, the storyteller told us a Hindu story. Hindu It was about the creation of the earth and the five elements.

In the story there were two siblings called Yama and Yami. There was no night time so they travelled the world together. One day Yami went for a walk to find some berries in the woods and when she got back she found Yama lying under a tree so she called to him, "Yama! Yama! Yama!" But there were no movements. She knew her brother was dead. For hours and hours she cried. The five elements started to worry about her because if she cried too much she would flood the earth so the five elements came down to comfort Yami. Then they made night time so everyday Yami felt better because she got her sleep. The moral of this story was that if we work together we can solve problems
